Information types and files

Global Network Group collects data related to the registration and certification of persons, companies, organizations, products, and services.

Global Network Group distinguishes two information types and files, which are:

- data intended for the publication of the public profile(s) of the (candidate) certificate holder (profile file) and
- data intended for the qualification as a certificate holder and maintaining the granted registration and certification (certification file).

Global Network Group holds these information types/files on separate servers.

Profile file

Global Network Group holds an individual profile file of each certificate holder. This file contains:

- Name and location details of the company or the location where the business activities are actually executed;
- Phone, fax, and website data.
- Contact form, connected to the personal or company email address of the certificate holder;
- Links to other profiles and information, such as social media, platforms, comparison websites, marketing, and sales channels. Links can be placed/inserted by Global Network Group or the certificate holder;
- Logo's, photo's, information related to the person and the company;
- Other information related to the certification.

Global Network Group pre-fill profiles based on the application form and social-media links.

Certificate holders can manage their own profile files, except certificate details.

If the certificate holder holds a valid certificate, the profile file is public.

The profile file is public if the certificate holder's status is put on hold, suspended, or revoked.

However, the public status is limited to the maximum of five consecutive years, counted from the moment of putting on hold, suspension, or revoking.

If the certificate holder or Global Network Group ends the certification, or the certification is put on hold, suspended, or revoked, Global Network Group keeps the profile file for an undefined period unless the certificate holder files a deletion request.

Certification file

Global Network Group holds an individual certification file of each certificate holder. This file contains:

- All correspondence, documents, and information related to the qualification for the certification and maintaining the certification;
- All correspondence, documents, and information related to the (disciplinary) complaint and dispute handling, as far as related to the registration and certification;
- Other correspondence, documents, and information related to the registration and certification.

A certification file is not public. A certification file is confidential. Authorized authorities and supervisors are allowed to perform audits.

A certification file is kept for an undefined period, even after ending the certification, whatever the reason for the ending is.

After ending the certification, the certificate holder can request to delete his/her certification file. Global Network Group is allowed to deny this request, if objections exist, or if authorized authorities or national laws/regulations urge/force thereto. If Global Network Group denies the request, it is bound to motivate the rejection. In any case, if the request is granted, the certificate holder is bound to waive the liability/responsibility of Global Network Group in this regard.
